1. Centre for Democracy and Development

(Special; 2003)

Introduction

The Centre for Democracy and Development (CDD) is a flagship institution and a resource of first instance on public policy and scholarship within the West African sub region. Since its inception, CDD has been at the cutting edge in terms of harnessing the capacity of the academy through research and dialogue on the critical issues of governance, poverty, constitutionalism, security sector transformation in countries in transition and other core concerns that have since been articulated within the framework of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs). The organization has over the years, developed a strong policy platform for governments and the civil society which has equally combined a robust advocacy organ to link the component of academy with that of activism in driving social processes and change. In February 2006, CDD’s founding Director Dr. Kayode Fayemi concluded his statutory tenure and was replaced by renowned West African bilingual scholar and activist, Dr. Jibrin Ibrahim, formerly Nigerian Country Director of the United States organization, Global Rights Partners for Justice. Dr Fayemi now sits on the organization’s trustees board. Following this transition, the centre has been repositioned for a deepened engagement in West Africa even though the organization’s aims and purposes remain the same. As such our work has enlarged to address the emerging challenges to the democratization agenda with our West African programmes outreach expanding to cover political parties and electoral processes, a regional tracking of the Millennium Development Goals through research and advocacy on gender responsive budgeting and a continued commitment to rebuilding democratic institutions and processes in post-conflict West Africa.

Part of the reason for the slight limitation in participation is the fact that information about international meetings and conferences is sparse does not always reach us on time. We have therefore provided updated contact email information to facilitate better communication.

2. Global Fund for Women

(Special; 1995)

Part I

i. Introductory statement recalling the aims and purposes of the organization

The aim and purpose of the Organization is to provide funds to seed, strengthen and link groups that are committed to women’s well being and that work for their full participation in society; to encourage increased support for women’s programs globally; and to provide leadership in promoting a greater understanding of the importance of supporting women’s full participation internationally. The Global Fund for Women (GFW) envisions a just and democratic world, where women and men can participate equally in all aspects of social, political, and economic life. The organization is part of a global women’s movement that is rooted in a commitment to justice and an appreciation of the value of women’s experience.

The challenges that women face vary widely across communities, cultures, religious traditions and countries. It is the Global Fund for Women’s belief that women themselves know best how to determine their needs and propose solutions for lasting change.

1) Increase in geographical membership

Geographical Distribution of the Organization’s Advisory Council for Programs has not changed since the last Report.

Since the Organization’s last report in 2002, 1,736 grants totaling $20.8 million, have been given to 1,391 women’s groups in 138 countries and territories. In fiscal year 2005-06, 649 grants totaling $7.8 million have gone to 618 women’s groups in 120 countries.

Sources of funding/Expenditures

The Global Fund for Women’s net assets at the end of fiscal year 2005-06 were $20 million as compared to $12.3 million at the end of the last reporting period, fiscal year ending in 2002. This increase was contributed to by increases in individual contributions and the completion of the endowment campaign.

3. Handicap International

(Special; 1999)

I. Introduction

(i) Handicap International intervenes in all settings on behalf of people with disabilities to enable them to access services and to promote the exercise of their rights of self-determination. Within its areas of activity, it works to reduce the risks of disability and to prevent people from becoming disabled. As an international solidarity association, it is non-governmental, non-denominational, without political affiliation and not for profit. The network of national associations work tirelessly to mobilize resources, co-manage projects and draw attention to the principles and activities of the Handicap International movement.

(ii) Significant changes since 2003:

– On 1 July 2006, Handicap International merged with another emergency relief NGO, Atlas Logistique, following a long-standing collaboration. Handicap International now has an Emergency Response Department to provide a multidisciplinary humanitarian response for refugees, displaced persons or disaster victims, and offers specialized care for trauma victims and people with disabilities;
– Two new sections of Handicap International have been established in Canada (2003) and in the United States of America (2006) alongside the pre-existing sections in France, Belgium, Switzerland, Luxembourg, Germany and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. As of December 2006, Handicap International was present in 60 countries.

This group is the International Disability Caucus (IDC). Sub-groups have been established within this group to focus on each article of the Convention. Handicap International has been heavily involved in the work on articles 32, 11 and 28. During the course of 2005 and 2006, consultations and collaboration were initiated in specific areas with other agencies: the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS). In 2005, Handicap International initiated a significant scaling up of its methodological, organizational and operational contributions to the United Nations agencies dealing with humanitarian aid and coordinating efforts related to United Nations reform (OCHA (management cluster)); UNHCR (protection cluster); and the World Food Programme (logistics cluster). International Handicap inputs include theoretical modelling of emergency assistance to disabled and vulnerable people and involvement in organizing operational capacities in crisis situations. While the aims of the organization remain the same, its methods have been adapted to the needs of today, and to different regions and cultures. The AIC is the umbrella organization of 250,000 women, volunteers organized in national associations and groups in formation in 52 countries, 11 of them in industrialized and 42 in developing countries. Its members are working in their own communities and are committed to the fight against all forms of poverty, as well as the promotion of sustainable development.

2) New associations accepted in 2005: AIC-Viet Nam, Mozambique, Cuba, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and Ghana. In the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Indonesia, Belarus and Chad new groups are collaborating with AIC. They promote actions of solidarity within AIC: At the end of 2006 more than 20 partnerships between member associations existed.

3) Intervening for Gender Equality: In 2005 AIC delegates decided to focus its work on the fight against female poverty, reinforce their fight against violence against women, study the interdependency of female poverty, cultural heritage and customs and strengthen political action on all levels by fostering the application of existing laws, lobbying for legislation in order to create or change existing laws in favour of vulnerable groups (Peru, Spain, Belgium, Madagascar, United Kingdom), and by reinforcing existing activities in support of global principles.

5. International Centre for Trade and Sustainable Development

(Special; 2003)

Aims and Purpose The International Centre for Trade and Sustainable Development (ICTSD) was established in Geneva in September 1996 to contribute to a better understanding of development and environment concerns in the context of international trade. As an independent non-profit and non-governmental organization, ICTSD engages a broad range of actors in ongoing dialogue about trade and sustainable development. With a wide network of governmental, non-governmental and inter-governmental partners, ICTSD plays a unique systemic role as a provider of original, non-partisan reporting and facilitation services at the intersection of international trade and sustainable development.

Mission: By empowering stakeholders in trade policy through information, networking, dialogue, well-targeted research, and capacity building, to influence the international trade system such that it advances the goal of sustainable development.

ICTSD facilitates interaction between policy-makers and those outside the system to help trade policy become more supportive of sustainable development. By helping parties increase capacity and become better informed about each other, ICTSD builds bridges between groups with seemingly disparate agendas. It seeks to enable these actors to discover the many places where their interests and priorities coincide, for ultimately sustainable development is their common objective.
ICTSD has grown both in size and in scope. At the outset, ICTSD employed a small staff of four; today, ICTSD regularly employs a staff of about thirty professionals and interns with expertise in law, economics, management and sustainable development. While it has remained committed to the basic principles articulated by its founders, ICTSD has evolved into a dynamic, internationally respected provider of news and analysis of issues in trade and sustainable development.

Participation in Economic and Social Council and United Nations activities

Through its Executive Director, the Centre participates in the “United Nations Millennium Project’s Task Force on Trade”. As a member of Task Force 9 on Open, Rule-Based Trading Systems, ICTSD through its Chief Executive contributed to the publication “Trade for Development” which presents the framework necessary to correct this imbalance and give developing countries greater economic growth potential and a more effective capacity to defeat poverty. ICTSD also leads the Trade and Development Symposium, an informal consortium of international organizations, research institutes and Non-Governmental Organization (NGOs) active around major trade and development events, and has served as a principal convener of the Global Biodiversity Forum (GBF) on Trade.

Cooperation with United Nations Bodies

ICTSD has observer Status at the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the Codex Alimentarius Commission and at the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO). It is also accredited to the Convention on Biodiversity (CBD), the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES) and the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC). Since July 2005, ICTSD is an accredited member of the Governing Council of United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP). ICTSD attends the conferences and meetings of these United Nations bodies and holds over 30 expert meetings and side events with United Nations bodies every year. Below is a sample of meetings that ICTSD covered and will continue to do so. The meetings are explained in detail below:

- Conference of the Parties (COP-8), Convention on Biological Diversity (COP 8) held from 20 to 31 March 2006 in Curitiba, Brazil.
- Meeting of the Parties (MOP-3), Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety. 13-17 March 2006 in Curitiba, Brazil.

The main goals of the project were to improve understanding of the development implications of the Trade Related Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) Agreement and to strengthen the analytical and negotiating capacity of developing countries so that they are better able to participate in IPR-related negotiations in an informed fashion in furtherance of their sustainable development objectives.

In cooperation with the United Nations Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC), ICTSD held a dialogue in Punta Arenas, Costa Rica from 10 to 12 May 2006 on Intellectual Property, Innovation and Sustainable Development.

Evolution of ICTSD

From its early days as a small, tightly focused resource centre to its current status as a highly efficient information provider and facilitator, ICTSD has evolved to meet the needs of the international trade and sustainable development communities. ICTSD has been a presence at each of the World Trade Organization’s Ministerial Conferences, where it has provided support services for its affiliates and the general public. The 5th Ministerial Conference was held in Cancún, Mexico from 10 to 14 September 2003. The main task was to take stock of progress in negotiations and other work under the Doha Development Agenda. The 6th Ministerial Conference was held in Hong Kong Special Administrative Region of China, 13-18 December 2005 to reach an agreement on the Doha trade negotiations. In general, ministerial conferences are the WTO’s highest decision-making body, meeting at least once every two years and providing political direction for the organization. At this Ministerial Conferences, ICTSD produced daily briefings in four languages, providing immediate information about the progress and sustainable development implications of the negotiations.
